MEET OUR DONORS

Spokane Valley Farmers Market Fund

Tom and Karen Stebbins envision Spokane Valley as a bustling hub of collaboration, innovation and neighborly fellowship. Picture a walkable downtown area, a venue for weekly events and an active park with families congregating. The Stebbins believed that by bringing a Farmers Market to the Spokane Valley community they could provide that space for their neighbors.

The Stebbins, who helped establish and are actively involved with JAKT Foundation, realized that managing the funds for this community initiative was too much to handle alone.

"We partnered with Innovia Foundation to establish a fund that supports the Spokane Valley Farmers Market," says Tom. "We hope this inspires our community to see the impact of the farmers market as an anchor in our community for healthy and sustainable food and supporting local vendors and farmers."

The Spokane Valley Farmers Market will allow local farmers, craft makers and chefs to showcase their talents and culinary temptations. Neighbors. families and friends of all ages will have a space to celebrate Spokane Valley's farming heritage while enjoying fresh produce, artisan foods and live music.

"We want our community to come together to enjoy the excellent food produce and goods that Spokane Valley residents have to offer," says Tom. "By managing the Spokane Valley Farmers Market Fund, Innovia Foundation gives us a great partner to ensure we can make this market happen every summer."

the love of her life at the Seattle MS walk. In April, Morgan and her parents participated in the Spokane MS walk and raised over $62,000 to support the National MS Society. The walk allowed the Spokane community to stand in solidarity with

John and Nancy Larson Fund

When their daughter Morgan was diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis (MS) at the age of 27, John and Nancy Larson were shaken but driven to help in any way possible. The family began a diligent effort to discover a cure through philanthropy and fundraising.

"A lot of people don't know how to cope with the news that a loved one is sick," says John. "For Nancy and me as parents, we found the best way of dealing with this disease was to put all our effort into helping Morgan and the thousands of others affected by MS. We can't stop and won't stop until there is a cure

In his role as a professional advisor at Richards, Merrill & Peterson, John has been connecting clients to Innovia Foundation for years, helping them achieve their philanthropic dreams. In 2017. John and Nancy established a donor-advised fund at the Foundation which supports the MS society and its life-changing research.

"I wanted to set a good example for my kids," says John. "Our goal was to show them the importance of giving back to the community Establishing our family fund with Innovia Foundation was a great way to do that."

Alissa Ludeman - Scholarship Recipient

Despite her determination, Alissa Ludeman was struggling. At Rogers High School, she experienced academic troubles and failing grades. Only an eventual visit to a neurologist revealed that an essential tremor was responsible for her difficulties with

"Speech and hearing are such an important part of how people communicate with others, and it's isolating when you are struggling with those basic functions. I want to make sure no one ever feels alone."

-Alissa Ludeman

Alissa faced the challenge head-on and stayed committed to graduating, but she was overwhelmed by the financial demands of her first college choice, Washington State University. With help from her school counselor, she discovered the Ren H. Rice scholarship at Innovia Foundation, intended for Spokane County students in foster care or with physical disabilities.

Now a three-time recipient, Alissa is a sophomore studying Speech and Hearing in WSU's Elson S. Floyd College of Medicine. "I would not be here without this scholarship," she says.

Alissa looks forward to continuing her education with a Master's or doctoral program. "After seeing the effects that physical and cognitive disabilities can have on people, I knew that I wanted to help in any way I could," she said.

> DONATE OR LEARN HOW TO PARTNER WITH US AT INNOVIA.ORG

NEWSLETTER SPONSOR: Richards, Merrill & Peterson

"For many, fulfilling their philanthropic goals can be a challenging task. Innovia Foundation has a proven history of working with individuals, families and businesses to make the giving process simple, transparent and most importantly, effective."

—Steve Larson, CEO, Richards, Merrill & Peterson

PROFESSIONAL ADVISOR SPOTLIGHT

Jim Zuberbuhler

The common thread in Jim Zuberbuhler's career and volunteerism is a deep dedication to his community. After 25 years working in higher, secondary and outdoor education, Jim became a financial advisor. In his current role as Associate Vice President and Financial Advisor with D.A. Davidson & Co. in Sandpoint, Jim uses his skills and experience to help people optimize their lives financially, providing clients with retirement planning and funding strategies for post-secondary education.

Jim sees the Foundation as the ideal partner for clients who want to transform the lives and communities around them. "When people think about giving back to the community, I direct them to Innovia Foundation," he says.

When he's not helping clients with retirement planning, Jim spends much of his time outside work volunteering with numerous nonprofit organizations and enjoying the beauty of our region.

As board president of land conservation nonprofit Kaniksu Land Trust, Jim served as the co-chair of a capital campaign that raised $2.1 million for community forest Pine Street Woods. Jim also serves as the race director of the Long Bridge Swim, one of the Northwest's premier openwater swims which is celebrating its 25th year. After a number of tragic drownings in the community, he helped develop a water safety program to ensure every Bonner County kid knows how to swim. Now in its tenth year, the Long Bridge Swim lessons program serves over 1,000 kids each year.

Jim also serves on the boards of Forrest Bird Charter School and the Bonner County Communiversity, has served as a board member of the Greater Sandpoint Chamber of Commerce and was president of the 2010-12 Leadership Sandpoint class.

"I think the Foundation is a great resource for Sandpoint, and look forward to continuing to connect our community to Innovia." Jim says. "It truly feels like a partnership. I have enjoyed participating in the Community Strategies grant process on behalf of a number of Sandpoint nonprofits and have come to regard the leadership and staff at Innovia Foundation as valued partners in my role as a community volunteer.'

-Jim Z

innovia.org

info@innovia.org

509-624-2606

driving community transformation

Summer 2019

PARTNERING TO ENSURE

New Bloomsday Fund will impact health and wellbeing for years to come

With Bloomsday's growth in the early years, Don and other key organizers

The Lilac Bloomsday Run is a powerful example of community rallying together. Don's passion has inspired countless others, including the 5,000 volunteers who now collaborate to support Bloomsday-related activities such as Junior Bloomsday, the Marmot March and the race itself. Don's ethos of volunteerism has rippled throughout the region and created a passionate network of runners and volunteers committed to the civic benefit, social improvement and physical wellbeing of our community.

very May, nearly 40,000 people

Bloomsday course through the run, jog or walk the 12-kilometer

streets of Spokane. When Don Kardong

first proposed this annual road race in participants to an iconic spring event

that draws world-class contestants

1977, he wasn't expecting it to grow

from an inaugural run with 1,200

from far and wide.

realized that a nonprofit corporation was needed not only to organize Bloomsday but also to be a beacon for health and wellbeing in our region. From sponsoring cross country meets for kids to facilitating the annual Fit for Bloomsday training program that teaches over 7,000 elementary school students each year about fitness and nutrition, the association is actively involved in promoting physical wellbeing in our region.

Now, two longtime Inland Northwest institutions are partnering to ensure this legacy endures. In 2019, the Lilac Bloomsday Association founded the Bloomsday Fund at Innovia Foundation to support their charitable initiatives and provide a source of sustainable fundina.

"Innovia Foundation's devotion to the health and vibrancy of our region makes it the perfect home for the fund," says attorney Carol Hunter, member of the Lilac Bloomsday Association Board.

Bloomsday will thrive for years to come through the fund and through a community that is committed to health, fitness and the collaboration of the thousands of enthusiastic volunteers who make Bloomsday happen every year. Thanks to their dedication, the race will continue bringing together the community in a fun and healthy way for vears to come.

terested in supporting Bloomsday to nsure it continues to have a positive mpact on the health and fitness of the nmunity? Visit Innovia.org/give-noı to make a donation to the Bloomsday und at Innovia Foundation.

IMPACT IN ACTION

Here are just a few stories about the impact Innovia Foundation's grant recipients are making in our communities.

> For more stories, visit innovia.org

QUALITY

OF LIFE

FROM OUR CEO

Shelly O'Quinn, CEO

As I begin my third year as Innovia Foundation's CEO. I am grateful and inspired by the generosity I have seen throughout Eastern Washington and North Idaho. Our staff, board and volunteers have spent the last year being present in our communities, learning firsthand the opportunities and challenges of our region from the people who live here.

Your generosity is transforming lives and communities in our region. In 2018, Innovia Foundation awarded nearly $7 million in grants and scholarships, and witnessed how collaboration can maximize these resources - from a community ice rink in Bonners Ferry to a new fund that will ensure the future of the beloved Lilac Bloomsday race.

In January, we began a strategic planning process that resulted in a new vision and mission, as well as a new plan for the Foundation that will be unveiled later this year. Moving forward we will remain attentive to the needs of our communities, using our resources to improve access to education, promote health and wellbeing, support arts and culture, create economic opportunity and enhance quality of life.

We deeply appreciate the dedication of our community partners, donors and stakeholders. This year, we have seen your generosity become contagious, igniting cooperative efforts to transform lives throughout our region. In these stories, you'll read how our work together has made the Inland Northwest a more vibrant and sustainable place for people to thrive.

BEYOND THE INLAND

COAST Transportation

For the past 44 years, Coast Transportation has been one of the "One of our clients is 95 years wise only transportation sources for rural and utilizes our services three communities throughout the Inland days a week. She does exercise at Northwest. A division of the Council the public library, then goes to the on Aging and Human Services, elementary school to help children the Colfax-based organization is read. She always jokes that she frequently the only way citizens would probably sit at home and of rural areas can grocery shop, attend medical wither away if it weren't for our appointments and take services." advantage of community Ryan Avery

> Growing demand for Coast's services > > created an undeniable need for new technology, as many of their scheduling tools had not been updated since 1999. To aid Coast in enhancing and protecting the wellbeing of these vulnerable populations, Innovia Foundation awarded a $30,000 Community Strategies grant that allowed Coast to upgrade their scheduling software.

> > > This more efficient technology will allow Coast to improve the Quality of life for individuals in our region who struggle to make it out of the house and often cannot drive for a host of reasons.

Coast Transportation Coordinator

EDUCATION & YOUTH DEVELOPMENT

Timberline School District

In Weippe, ID, where the timber industry's decline has left poverty and addiction in its wake, Timberline School is dedicated to seeing youth succeed. Though self-confidence and determination do not always come easily to students, the Timberline staff know the classroom can be the perfect place to build a foundation for success.

With this vision in mind, the school launched "Leader in Me," a holistic learning module that gives students the tools to thrive by teaching them leadership, cultural

"In our classroom, we used our leadership binders to keep track of goals in reading. I like to show my parents my leadership binder."

- Blake, Second Grade

engagement and goalcentered academics. "More than a program, Leader in Me serves as a foundational operating system for the school," says Jason Hunter, principal of Timberline.

Based on The 7 Habits of Highly Effective People, the module is integrated into pre-existing curricula and programs, offering students the social and emotional skills and support they often lack. "We expect to have a positive impact on the youth of our community that will build a paradigm shift in overall community wellbeing and sustainability," says Jason.

Despite lack of funding, Timberline implemented the program as a pilot project with a small number of students. A $19,578 Community Strategies grant will help Timberline achieve full district participation by the beginning of the 2019-20 school year.

ECONOMIC OPPORTUNITY

Tesh

Tim spent his days in his room, interacting only with family and the support team that helps him live with blindness. Then his family and friends introduced him to Tesh, an organization that offers opportunities to people with disabilities who are seeking greater self-sufficiency and community participation.

At first, Tim requested that Tesh give him meal preparation instruction alone. After a few months, however, he joined a meal preparation class. Not only can Tim now safely navigate a kitchen and prepare meals, but he has also become part of a new community.

Tesh was challenged by their limited kitchen size, and class members often spent much of the time observing instead of actively practicing. To help Tesh provide a hands-on experience to all participants, Innovia Foundation awarded a $12,447 Community Strategies grant. The remodeled kitchen includes a range of new appliances, updated venting systems and lighting, and accommodations for children and people in "Assisting clients in developing meal preparation skills to live more independently changes not only their lives but affects the community in which they choose to live."

- Frances Huffman, CEO, Tesh

Salish School of Spokane

The original Salish languages of the Inland Northwest were dying, and the region was at risk of losing its heritage. "Salish language and culture are a deep repository for the human and ecological history of our region," says Christopher Parkin, principal of Salish School of Spokane.

Seeing these languages nearly disappear in the past, the Salish School is now ensuring they remain integral to our region's future. As the world leader in Salish curricula development and as the largest Native American immersion school in the northwest U.S., the school aims to foster intergenerational connections and produce a vibrant community of fluent Salish speakers.

To aid in revitalizing the Salish language and healing our region's culture, Innovia Foundation contributed a $18,494 Community Strategies grant toward the Community Salish Language and Culture Project - a three-step program that will offer free Salish and Native cultural arts classes, establish a youth performance group, and release an app with guided tours of cultural sites.

"This project will serve both Native Americans and the broader community. The knowledge embedded in Salish language and culture is a treasure for all people who now call Spokane home."

HEALTH & WELLBEING

Boundary County Parks and Recreation

For residents of Boundary County, sports and outdoor recreation are vital to healthy living and enjoying Idaho's natural beauty. While warmer months see substantial participation in these activities, the long winters are full of overcrowded gyms and limited outdoor opportunities. Many adopt more sedentary routines once cold weather arrives.

After a community health assessment highlighted this issue, the Boundary County Parks and Recreation department introduced a new winter recreation option: a synthetic ice rink at the fairgrounds in Bonners Ferry. Beginning with a High Five Community Transformation grant from Blue Cross of Idaho Foundation, the community sought to leverage their initial funding to create a larger budget. Recognizing the rink's importance to the county's health and recreational opportunities, Innovia Foundation contributed a $20,000 Community Strategies grant to the project.

The makeshift pond previously used as a rink was hugely successful but was frequently unusable due to higher temperatures. The synthetic ice will be accessible even in non-freezing conditions. The new rink will be open free of charge to the public for up to 120 days annually, giving people of all ages a place to stay fit through exercise and active fun during the winter months.

First Story

In 1988, First Story began providing hardworking and capable families with affordable homes, giving them the initial step toward financial independence. Founded by Hayden Homes, the nonprofit has now provided 77 homes for families throughout

Oregon, Washington and Idaho, with plans of completing 150 homes by 2030. Designed according to the aesthetics of the local community, the homes are move-in ready and typically contain three bedrooms and three

The employees of Washington Trust Bank have been inspired by First Story since 2009 and have worked on building projects with the nonprofit. "Jack Heath, Washington Trust Bank President and chief operating officer, has a big heart and gets what we're trying to do," says Claire Duncan, executive director of First Story. "He has shown incredible passion for helping people achieve the American Dream."

This year, the bank has provided grants from their donor-advised endowment fund at Innovia Foundation to First Story. These grants will support two new homes - one in Caldwell, ID, which will go to a single mother and her two children, and one in Kennewick, WA, which will go to a veteran returning from a decade of service.

"We know that a home is so much more than a roof, four walls, sticks and bricks," says Claire. "We believe a home is a ladder out of poverty, a first step towards financial freedom and economic independence."

